

Global Tax Policy

Introduction

Mobileye Global Inc. together with its subsidiaries (“Mobileye” or the “Company”) is a global technology company focused on advancing autonomous driving and driver-assistance technologies.

Operating across multiple jurisdictions, Mobileye recognizes that responsible tax conduct is an important part of its ethical business practices, corporate responsibility and long-term business strategy. The Company seeks to manage its tax affairs efficiently while complying with applicable tax laws and regulations in all jurisdictions in which it operates.

Our Approach

Tax Governance and Compliance

Mobileye’s tax functions operate as part of the Company’s finance organization, which spans multiple jurisdictions, and is overseen by the Company’s senior finance leadership, including the Chief Financial Officer.

The Company is committed to:

- Accurate and timely tax compliance
- Proper tax reporting
- Maintaining appropriate internal controls over tax processes
- Compliance with applicable tax laws and reporting obligations

Mobileye’s tax professionals, together with external advisors where appropriate, monitor developments in the respective tax legislation and international tax standards to support compliance across the business.

Tax Planning, Transfer Pricing and Risk

Mobileye seeks to manage its tax affairs responsibly in support of its commercial operations and long-term shareholder interests.

The Company is committed to applying the arm’s-length principle in accordance with applicable law and, where relevant, OECD transfer pricing guidelines. Intercompany arrangements are supported by appropriate analysis and documentation in accordance with applicable requirements.

Mobileye seeks to align its tax arrangements with its business activities and the commercial substance of its operations. Mobileye seeks to manage tax risk responsibly and does not support artificial tax arrangements or structures lacking commercial substance.

The Company may utilize tax incentives, credits and other legislatively intended tax benefits where aligned with business activities and applicable laws.

As a majority-owned subsidiary of Intel Corporation, Mobileye is a member of the Intel group for certain tax purposes. For as long as Mobileye remains part of the Intel group, certain of its tax matters, including the tax sharing arrangements between Mobileye and Intel and its eligibility for certain tax incentives that are determined at the group level, are affected by such membership.

Relationship with Tax Authorities

Mobileye seeks to maintain professional, transparent and cooperative relationships with tax authorities in the jurisdictions in which it operates and is committed to providing them with timely and accurate information in accordance with applicable legal requirements.

Where tax laws are unclear or subject to interpretation, Mobileye may seek advice from external advisors or engage with tax authorities to obtain greater certainty.

General Provisions

This Tax Policy is endorsed by Mobileye's senior management and supported by internal processes and controls designed to support effective implementation across the organization.

This policy statement is provided for informational purposes only and reflects Mobileye's current approach to tax matters as of the date of publication. It does not create any legally binding obligations beyond those imposed under applicable law and may be amended, supplemented, or withdrawn at any time at the Company's sole discretion, without prior notice, including to reflect changes in applicable laws, regulations, business operations, or governance practices.
